Worth Charting

Yesterday, we sent out a one-question poll to Worth Charting Institutional clients, and wanted to apprise you of the results. As all will know, we've been providing technical research for institutions for decades, and our client base comprises the largest mutual funds, pension plans, endowments, hedge funds, and family offices in North America, Europe, and Asia.

We also put out the same one-question poll on Twitter.

We thought you, our Worth Charting Subscribers, would be interested in the results generally, and the difference between the institutions and individuals specifically.

The poll sought to determine sentiment around the NASDAQ-100 Index, which, at the end of last year, had delivered 13 consecutive years of positive total returns. This year, the index is struggling, as all will know, and our one question poll was:

True or false?

The NASDAQ-100 Total Return Index will end the year in the green.

398 institutional clients replied.

Results:

True 37.4%

False 62.6%

Note: we ourselves chose false.

The Twitter results below are similar in terms of outcome (people are not sanguine), but different in terms of the spread.
